When Will the World

Be Full of People?

Will the world be full of people in the year 2250? Such is the prediction of J. Holt Schooling, who fills six pages of the July Cosmopolitan with figures and diagrams to support this conclusion.

According to the best authorities the population of the world was 2,000,000 in 1810, 847,000,000 in 1828, 1,009,000,000 in 1845, 1,391,000,000 in 1874 and 1,483,000,000 in 1886. This increase was at the rate of 12 per thousand per year from 1810 to 1828; of 10 per thousand from 1828 to 1845; of 11 per thousand from 1845 to 1874, and of 6 per thousand from 1874 to 1886. The average yearly rate of increase during the nineteenth century was ten persons per one thousand of population.

In the period between 1800 and 1850 the United States grew at the rate of 39 per thousand annually. Russia 14 per thousand, the United Kingdom 13 per thousand, Germany 8 per thousand, France 6 per thousand. In the period between 1850 and 1890 the United States grew at the rate of 25 per thousand annually. Russia 8, the United Kingdom 8, Germany 8, France 2. Counting the whole period from 1800 to 1890, the growth per thousand of population in the United States was at the rate of 28 annually, Russia 11, the United Kingdom 10, Germany 8, France 3.

Mr. Schooling places great emphasis on the fact that the Teutonic, or German and Anglo-Saxon, nations, increased in population from 43,500,000 in 1800 to 191,000,000 in 1900, while the Latin nations, such as France, Spain and Italy, increased in population from 55,000,000 to only 90,000,000. At the same rate of increase the Teutons in the year 2000 will number 671,000,000 and the Latins 149,000,000. From this Mr. Schooling draws the conclusion that as the past has been with the Latin race, the future is for the Teuton stock, whose modern representatives are the peoples of the United States, Great Britain and Germany.

While the most remarkable instance filling up during the nineteenth century is in the United States, our density of population is not up to the average population per square mile in the world at large. We have now 21 persons to the square mile of land, Russia 15, China 95, Spain 96, France 186, Germany 263, Italy 289, the United Kingdom 339, Holland 411 and Belgium 572. A density of population double that of Belgium would fill the world with people.

There is now in the world 31 persons to the square mile. At the same rate of increase there will be 83 persons to the square mile in the year 2000, 225 in 2100, 609 in 2200 and 1000 persons per square mile in 2250, or an aggregate population in the world of 52,073,000,000.—Ex.
